Market Experts/ Brokers/ Analyst		Views (Last one month)
Bank of America	Overweight	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> US equities remain the global front-runners, helped by solid profit growth and rising economic activity
JP Morgan	Overweight	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> Strong earnings delivery Market is supported by fundamentals Small caps continue to benefit from US domestic strength
Russell Investments	Underweight	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> The hurdle for US earnings to surprise on the upside is now very high The impact of corporate tax cuts on earnings will soon disappear, and both borrowing costs and wages are headed higher A slowdown in earnings growth will take away one of the main supports for US outperformance relative to other markets
Morgan Stanley	Underweight	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> US equities are in the latter stages of a cyclical bull market While the acceleration of the Trump/Republican progrowth agenda has created a booming economy and earnings outlook, it may also be sowing the seeds for the end of the cycle as the Fed is forced to raise rates and tighten policy in a more deliberate manner
Aberdeen Standard Investments	Overweight	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> The US market is supported by healthy macroeconomic conditions Tax cuts will continue to boost company profits
UBS Group AG	Underweight	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> The standout resilience of US stocks is under threat with President Donald Trump mulling a new round of levies against China
BlackRock	Overweight	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> Unmatched earnings momentum Corporate tax cuts Fiscal stimulus Financials and technology are the favored sectors
Goldman Sachs	Bearish	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> A 25% tariff on Chinese goods could wipe out growth for S&P 500 companies next year If the US imposed levies on all global imports, earnings could drop 10% as costs go up for Americans The worst-case scenario could result in the S&P 500 falling to 2,230

JP Morgan	Underweight	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> EM markets are likely to face further headwinds from trade tensions
Canada Pension Plan Investment Board	Overweight	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> Emerging markets could actually benefit from the global trade tensions International trade pressures could eventually force the EM economy governments to implement structural changes and long-term reforms. That would be highly beneficial for long-term investors
SEB Bank	Underweight	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> The broker expects EM equities to be relatively stable and perhaps even to recover slightly in the coming few weeks, However, the poor underlying macro picture, and falling commodity prices, in combination with coming US Fed hikes, imply that EM assets will remain under pressure over the next six to 12 months

JP Morgan Chase China, CEO - Mark Leung	Overweight	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> The recent selloff in emerging markets has been overblown Investors should consider China, in particular, as the country is opening its financial sector Key developments include setting up a Shanghai-London stock exchange trading link, and a new settlement system for the bond investment scheme connecting the mainland to Hong Kong The broker hopes to see more supportive measures from the government from a fiscal standpoint
UBS Greater China investment banking arm, Chairman - Catherine Cai	Overweight	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> The impact on the Chinese economy from the trade tariffs will be small The Chinese government is now "prepared" to manage a trade war scenario The Chinese government has taken a lot of proactive policy to further beef up China's domestic consumption, such as loosening up monetary policy, and the central bank maybe going to ease more credit
Morgan Stanley	Overweight	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> EM's are expected to find support not far from current levels and will have a strong finish to the year
Northern Trust Capital	Overweight	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> Moderate growth and lower valuations should benefit emerging market equities, EM's are expected to return 8.3% per annum
Franklin Templeton Investments	Overweight	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> The broker holds a constructive view on emerging markets The contagion impact upon the broader EM asset class should be limited, given most countries have more robust institutions, orthodox economic policy, stronger finances, lower inflation and lower near-term financing requirements
Charles Schwab Corporation	Underweight	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> The near-term outlook is poor for EM equities amid rising US interest rates and elevated global trade tensions that support the US Dollar
Aberdeen Standard Investments	Overweight	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> EM equities are supported by global growth improvements, especially for key sectors such as Asian technology A tightening bias in China may prove to be a headwind for some sectors
Morgan Stanley	Overweight	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> Market needs to consolidate strong gains Broker expects EM equities to have a strong finish to the year

JP Morgan	Positive	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Positive real yields along most of the curve • Rates may rise a little
BlackRock	Underweight	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • The broker sees rates rising moderately amid economic expansion and Fed normalisation • The broker favors shorter-duration and inflation-linked debt as buffers against rising rates and inflation • It is better to prefer 15-year mortgages over their 30-year counterparts and versus short-term corporates
Danske Bank	Overweight	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • The broker continues to hold the view that 10Y treasury yields will move above the 3% level in 2019 • The labour market remains tight and the funding need continues to rise due to the expansive US fiscal policy
Aberdeen Standard Investments	Overweight	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • The broker believes that most of the tightening is already in the price of longer dated bonds and they offer attractive diversification against downside risks
UBS	Overweight	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • The broker is overweight 10-year US Treasury bonds versus USD cash, as they think this part of the curve has largely priced in the rate-hiking cycle and the carry is attractive
SEB Group	Overweight	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • The broker's forecast for US 10-year Treasury notes is that yields will exceed 3% around the turn of the year and then rise slowly to around 3.45% late in 2020 • Continued Fed rate hikes combined with tax cuts will lead to larger budget deficits and help boost bond issuance volumes, which suggests higher yields

Danske Bank	Underweight	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> The outlook for core inflation is still modest for the Eurozone There is still little risk of a rate hike before December 2019, when the ECB is expected to hike rate by 20bp The broker expects 10Y German yields to range-trade in a narrow 0.3-0.5% range for the rest of 2018
Morgan Stanley	Overweight	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> The broker recommends to tactically buying Italian bonds and stocks ahead of the country's budget announcement The broker reckons that Italy will aim for a deficit well below the EU threshold of 3% of GDP
SEB Group	Overweight	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> The broker forecast is that German 10-year government bond yields will climb to 0.50% at the end of 2018 and 1.10% at the end of 2019
BlackRock	Underweight	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> ECB's negative interest rate policy has made yields unattractive The broker remains cautious on peripherals given tight valuations, political risks in Italy and the upcoming end to the ECB's net asset purchases

Positive View

- Relative rate expectations should generally move in the Dollar's favour
- Rising global uncertainty provide support

Negative View

- An elevated valuation may constrain further gains
- A moderation in global growth in 2018 suggests no high conviction position

- A strong current account surplus will support a return to 1.30
- Euro fundamentals remain in place for a rebound

Negative View

- No material evidence of a meaningful reversal in relative data momentum
- Long-term factors are supportive, but technical factors are a headwind for the Euro

Positive View

- Pound Sterling is likely to recover over coming weeks as the prospect of a 'no deal' Brexit fades
- Macro data in the UK has stabilised recently

Negative View

- Deterioration in trade flows after Brexit could significantly impact business confidence in the UK
- Political uncertainty remains a major risk to the currency

- Italian budget, Brexit and Trade Wars could support safe-haven
- Japan's current account surplus continues to improve

Negative View

Wells Fargo	Underweight	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> The broker expects the Dollar's strength to wane in 2019 The Dollar strength, based on macroeconomic and monetary-policy divergence, has almost run its course, and the broker does not fully share the "king dollar" view The Dollar weakness seen in late 2017 and early 2018 will resume—and will be more apparent in 2019
BlackRock	Neutral	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> The broker is neutral on the US Dollar Rising global uncertainty and a widening US yield differential with other economies provide support However, an elevated valuation may constrain further gains
BNP Paribas Asset Management	Bearish	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> The broad greenback could plunge 10% in the next six to nine months
Invesco	Bearish	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> The Dollar will sink about 3% against the Euro by year-end As global growth improves and market participants start to speculate about policy changes from the ECB and BoJ, the Dollar's support from Fed hikes and trade tensions will wear off
HSBC	Bullish	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> The Dollar will strengthen further in the coming year and is a "buy" under most scenarios A superior US economic performance has enabled the Fed to go on raising interest rate Robust US GDP growth, higher ISM readings and the ongoing push higher in wage growth is further reason for the Fed to stick to its path The Dollar will remain on the front foot through the rest of 2018 and at least until the end of 2019
CIBC	Underweight	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> Dollar dominance days are numbered 2019 will see a slower pace for Fed hikes, and some initial monetary tightening by overseas central banks
Aberdeen Standard Investments	Underweight	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> Most of the Federal Reserve's interest rate increases have been priced into the market A moderation in global growth in 2018 suggests no high conviction position
DoubleLine Capital	Underweight	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> The Dollar will probably end lower at year-end than it is right now

JP Morgan	Overweight	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> There is scope for a rise in EUR/USD as the ECB turns more hawkish and growth in Eurozone remains strong
Citibank	Underweight	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> Although EUR rebounded 400 bps from lows, EUR may still face downside risk for the coming weeks as US data momentum still looks relatively buoyant compared with Europe and the Fed is still hawkish than the ECB
HSBC	Underweight	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> The EUR/USD rate is expected to decline to 1.13 by December before dropping to 1.10 in 2019
CIBC	Overweight	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> A strong current account surplus will support a return to 1.30 by 2020 as ECB starts hiking and Fed slows its current hiking cycle
Aberdeen Standard Investments	Underweight	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> Long-term factors are supportive, but technical factors are a headwind for the Euro

Citibank	Overweight	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> The broker maintains the moderate strengthening path for USD/JPY to 112 and 114 as policy divergence and unhedged purchases of US Treasuries, event risks around the Italian budget, Brexit and Trade Wars could support safe-haven JPY. 0 - 3m forecast: 112; 6 - 12m forecast: 114
Aberdeen Standard Investments	Overweight	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> Yen will act as a diversifier against risk of a global activity decline, due to safe haven characteristics
CIBC	Overweight	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> All signs point to a revival of Yen strength, with a sizeable current account surplus being a key ingredient, along with improving domestic fundamentals
SEB Group	Underweight	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> The USD/JPY pair will trade in the 105-110 range this year and in 2019 It will move towards 100 in the long term, as the Bank of Japan prepares to launch a less expansionary monetary policy
Citibank	Underweight	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> The broker does not expect a hike in policy rates until 2020 EM risk aversion may remain the main headwind for JPY bears near term

Gold Target by Major IBs

*Target with respect to actual level

Positive View

- Short investor positioning and recent pick-up in physical demand
- Gold prices could surge over the next year, due to widening US budget deficit and the prospect of the Trump tariff war hurting the US economy
- The US Dollar pressure might subside in the future
- Two factors that could end up underpinning gold are political risks and rising inflation

Negative View

- The current environment remains unattractive for precious metals
- Synchronized global growth
- Expectations of higher US interest rates have translated to further pain for the zero-yielding metal

Supply	811.4t	835.5t

Brent Target by Major IBs

Positive View

- Crude oil prices will continue to be volatile but the direction is likely to be tilted slightly upwards as OPEC will continue to manage prices
- US sanctions on Iranian crude oil exports will result in much tighter physical market conditions once they take effect in November
- The lack of spare oil capacity could push Brent crude to $100/b

Negative View

- Supply shifts, alongside the ongoing surge in Saudi production, create the risk that the oil market moves into surplus in third-quarter 2018
- Geopolitical issues, weaker uptake from China, and supply side issues at OPEC countries, could be the upside risks

Brent

	May 2018	June 2018
US Production (thousand barrels per day)	10,442	10,674
US Supply (thousand barrels per day)	20,357	20,705

Bank of America	Bullish	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> Gold prices could surge over the next year, due to widening US budget deficit and the prospect of the Trump tariff war hurting the US economy Bullion could average $1,350 an ounce in 2019
Goldman Sachs	Underweight	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> The broker stated that it is moderating its bullish view for gold due to a sell-off in emerging markets It lowered its 12-month price forecast for the metal to $1,325 per ounce, down from $1,450 an ounce earlier
Mitsubishi	Bullish	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> Investors may be overlooking some factors that potentially could underpin gold prices Two factors that could end up underpinning gold are political risks and rising inflation Donald Trump's presidency hinges on the mid-term elections. If the Democrats gain control of the House of Representatives in November, impeachment proceedings could begin in fairly short order. The political uncertainty engendered by an impeachment could see the Dollar lose ground and give some support to gold The second supportive aspect is if inflation starts to outstrip the Fed's guidance of raising interest rates to just over 3% by the end of 2019 – with the US economy at full employment and inflation already hitting the Fed's 2% target, it would not take much for inflation to outstrip nominal rates, increasing the attractiveness of gold as an inflation hedge
Morgan Stanley	Overweight	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> Investors should take profits in some of their equities and use it to build a 3% to 5% position in gold Gold can be used tactically as a potential hedge for a stock market correction and/or a reversal in the dollar and real interest rates Gold prices will eventually recover by the end of the year and push to $1,300 an ounce as market volatility rises The US dollar is likely to weaken and as the yield curve continues to invert, highlighting the growing risk of a slowdown in the US economy
TD Securities	Underweight	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> The current environment remains unattractive for precious metals It remains unlikely that the yellow metal will be able to muster any sustainable rally in the near term
ICBC Standard Bank	Underweight	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> Growing productivity, increased corporate investments and further tightening in the labour market in the US could prompt the Federal Reserve to revise its outlook for what it sees as a balanced interest-rate policy, which would be negative for the gold market

OANDA	Bullish	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> Oil prices are expected to remain in the bulls' domain Concerns remain that the US sanctions on Iranian crude oil exports will result in much tighter physical market conditions once they take effect in November
London Capital Group Holdings	Overweight	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> Russia and Saudi Arabia are essentially ignoring Trump's pleas Additionally, US sanctions hitting Iran's oil exports in early November means there will be fresh multi year highs for oil
ABans Group of Companies	Bullish	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> Brent oil prices are expected to remain at elevated levels Brent oil prices are set to rise further from current levels on supply disruption after Iran sanctions and a broader range of $80 to $90 per barrel looks achievable in the last quarter of this year
Bank of America	Overweight	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> There exists near-term supply risk from secondary sanctions on Iran that are set to begin November 4 and will be in full force in the first half of next year If additional Iranian production is removed from the oil market, which seems likely, and demand remains as strong as it has been, there is significant upside to oil prices When you throw Venezuelan supply disruptions into the mix, the upside risk feels even more significant
Goldman Sachs	Overweight	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> Oil has a strong fundamental outlook helped by US demand growth, supply losses and disruptions, and still constrained US shale output The broker's near-term Brent crude oil price target remains at $80 a barrel
SICO Bank	Neutral	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> Oil will broadly remain range-bound in the near-term between $70-$80 per barrel Hurricane Florence, Iran sanctions and other geopolitical risks would positively support it, while lower demand with a rise in interest rate cycles and trade war will be a drag to prices
